THE JOURNEY FELLOWSHIP AT INDIANA UNIVERSITY-BLOOMINGTON

What Does a Journey Fellow Do?

- Learn about and explore career opportunities to work with and serve young people
- Engage in exploration and self-reflection about personal values, passions, interests, hopes and dreams
- Network and build relationships with students, faculty, and youth professionals from a variety of fields who share similar interests
- Learn about and access resources on campus to make the college experience more meaningful and relevant to Fellows career interests
- Gain insight through potential credit-bearing internships and job-shadowing that allow Fellows to see how their passions can be applied in the real-world

What is The Journey?

Leadership and Renewal Outfitters, through a grant from the Lilly Endowment, is partnering with a committee of faculty, staff, and community partners of Indiana University-Bloomington to offer a yearly campus fellowship program for college students interested in careers working with youth.

At its core, the Journey is about helping students from a variety of academic disciplines to reflect on who they are while learning about and exploring the various career opportunities available for serving young people.
